

I compared my work in three different browsers: Firefox, Microsoft Edge, and Google Chrome. I noticed that in Chrome, the lines in the corner of my comments box on the contact page were different sizes. I also noticed that the bold text looks slightly different in Firefox than it does in Chrome. In Firefox, it looks softer and rounder. There was also different spacing between the dashes on the buttons that I added to indicate which page the viewer was on. In Chrome, the legend on my fieldset has been pushed to the right slightly. Edge has all the same differences that are found in Chrome, down to the spacing of the dashes on the buttons. I thought the colors looked slightly different in Firefox than in Chrome and Edge, but I wasn't sure. They seemed a little washed out.